Building Blocks: Talking With Children About Adoption

*What topic or part of the class did you find the most helpful?
"How to use [our] answers to model for kids and educate adults."
~Comment from Past Participant~*

“Because adoption almost never happens when everything is going as planned...”

Parents need to be prepared, equipped and even encourage questions, comments and dialogue about adoption with their friends, family, community and especially their children. Building Blocks is the first workshop in a 3 part series "What & When: Talking With Children About Adoption." Parents will learn how their journey to adoption impacts what they bring to their child's story, and how they became a part of each others lives.

This workshop is appropriate for adoptive parents, waiting parents, birth/first parents and professionals. We will also cover:

- The importance of sharing YOUR [parent's] Journey
- How talking with your family, friends and the community has an impact on your children and how they feel about their adoption story
